

We live in a social world. But how does that affect suicide and self-harm in young people?

About the project

inSITE is a three-year research project that aims to understand how the broader social, political, economic and environmental factors influence suicide and self-harm in young people in England.

SOCIAL DETERMINANTS

Why now?

The priorities of suicide prevention have too often been limited to the individual. Understanding and exploring how social determinants can manifest on an individual and structural level can help change that.

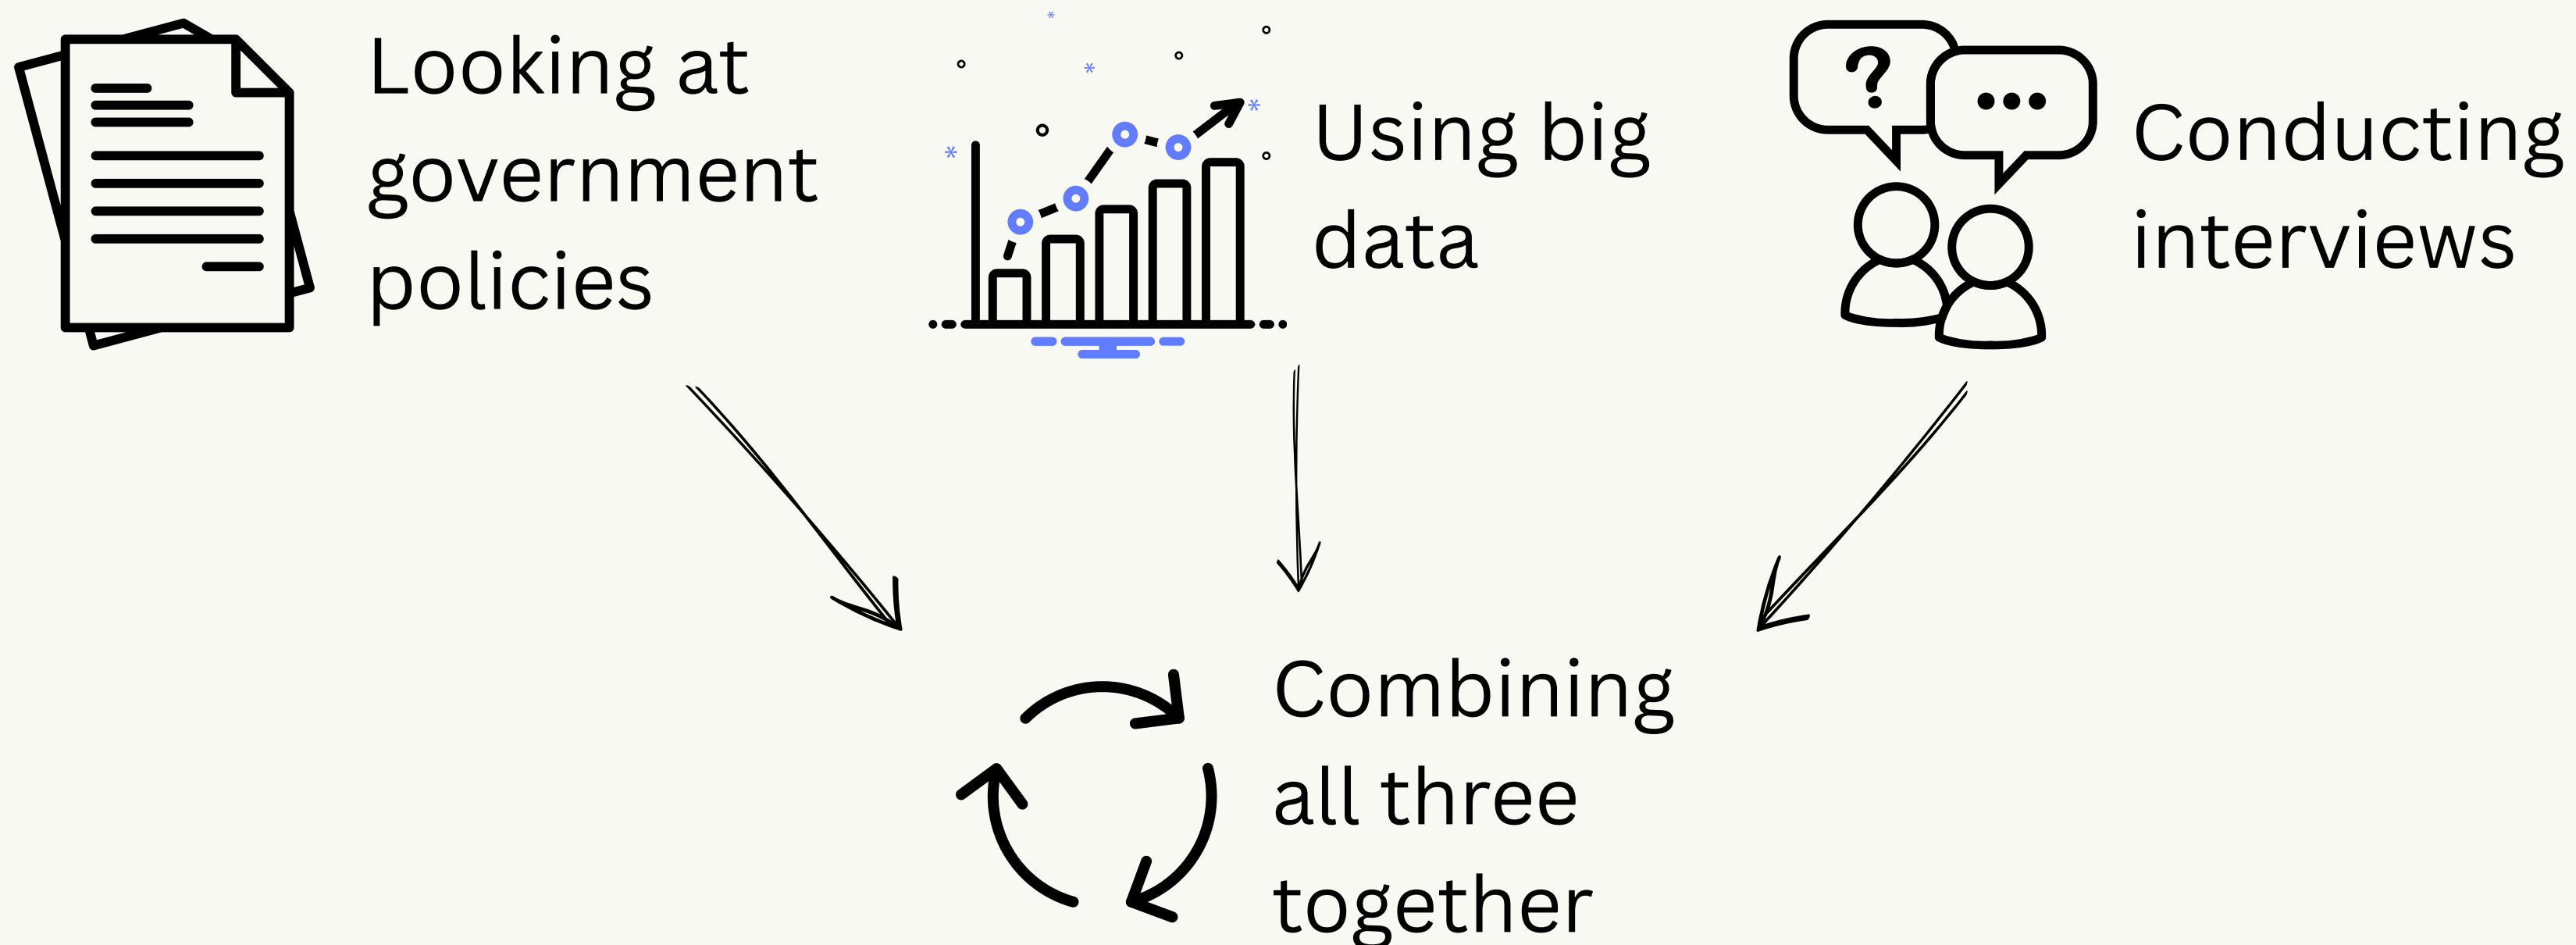

TO UNDERSTAND

What will we do?

This project is made up of 3 'work packages' each with a different focus.

How we do it?
